Life in the "after life" would be very weird. If in the "after life", I would look upon my friends and family who are still living and see them going about their lives in a normal manner. They would miss me, I hope, and I will miss them. I would view life in the "after life" as more free. I am not sure how life is, but would guess there would be less rules. If I were to say something to my friends and family, I would tell them not to worry
